Eastern Partnership Visa Liberalisation Index

Review of recent developments

February 2013

The liberalisation of the European Union visa regime is one of the priorities of the EU Eastern Partnership initiative covering Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Moldova and Ukraine. Achieving visa-free travel for short-term trips between the EU and its Eastern neighbours is important not only for the Eastern Partnership states, but also the European Union. Visa-free regime is not only about helping people-to-people contacts, boosting economic, cultural, scientific cooperation, promoting exchange of knowledge, know-how and ideas, the importance of which cannot be overestimated. The promise of visa-free travel also serves as an important motivation tool for the EaP states to introduce very needed but costly, complex and burdensome reforms. The process of visa liberalisation with the EU is governed by the conditionality principle and is granted to countries that are safe, well-governed, have adequate migration policy and good record in respecting and protecting human rights, including the rights of minorities, and are reliable partners for cooperation with the EU in a number of policy areas. Thus, each EaP country needs to introduce a number of reforms in key policy areas in order to meet these criteria. Thanks to these reforms the EaP countries will be closely cooperating with the EU to ensure public order and security, fight organised crime, protect EU external borders, will not be potential sources of large waves of asylum seekers – and in general will become reliable partners of the EU. Visa-free regime will be achievable when all the required criteria are met. In what follows, we look at the progress recently made by all the Eastern Partnership states in the required policy areas.

Introduction

All the required criteria and benchmarks are set out in the documents prepared by the European Commission known as Visa Liberalisation Action Plans (VLAP). Right now, three out of six EaP states have been granted such Action Plans: Moldova and Ukraine in 2011, and Georgia in 2013. However, the main criteria for all the countries are similar. Whereas, all the six EaP countries are implementing reforms in the key policy areas, including Belarus, which does not have official cooperation with the EU on visa policy. For these reasons it is possible to monitor the situation in every country according to a common methodology, including one set of criteria and benchmarks.

All the benchmarks in the Action Plans are grouped into four policy blocks: Block 1 is focused on ensuring that travel documents issued by EaP states conform to international standards and the issuance process is safe and reliable. Block 2 is aimed at ensuring adequate level of border and migration management as well as asylum policy in accordance with international standards. Block 3 focuses on public security and order, including prevention and fighting organized crime, terrorism and corruption; international judicial co-operation and law-enforcement co-operation; and ensuring high level of data protection. Finally, Block 4 is focused on anti-discrimination and respect and protection of human rights.<sup>1</sup>
